Plessy v. Ferguson / 10th Amendment vs. 14th Amendment—Answer Key

Directions:

1. Read the Background section on the 10th and 14th Amendments.

2. Answer the Questions to Consider.

Background

The arguments presented to the U.S. Supreme Court in Plessy v. Ferguson primarily involve two amendments to the Constitution that often compete. The 10th Amendment reserves broad, undefined powers for the states, and the 14th Amendment says states may not deny people equal protection of the law.

Federalism is a major principle of American government. In a federal system of government, there are three levels of government: national, state, and local. Government power is divided between and sometimes shared by the different levels.

The national government generally has power over issues of national concern. The states generally have power over issues of state concern including what are sometimes called “police powers.” For example, the national government has power over the defense of the nation because defense must be coordinated for the entire nation. The states have the power to issue drivers’ licenses because driving rules and conditions differ from state to state.

The state powers are often called reserved powers. These powers are not listed in the U.S. Constitution. The 10th Amendment states that if a power is not specifically given to the national government in the Constitution, it is reserved to the states or the people.

---

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>10th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Questions to Consider

1. Which amendment would Homer Plessy’s attorneys use to support his argument? How should they apply it?
   14th Amendment.
   The issue involves the separation of people based on race. The 14th Amendment, which, coming after the 10th Amendment, may alter the scope of the 10th, says states must treat people equally. So, the Court must determine that segregation is unconstitutional.

2. Which amendment would the state of Louisiana use to support its argument? How should they apply it?
   10th Amendment.
   The 10th Amendment states that powers not given to the national government are reserved for the states or to the people. Since this involved transportation within Louisiana, it could be argued that Louisiana had the right to regulate that transportation as it wished. For the federal courts to determine whether the state acted "reasonably" would deny the state the authority granted to it by the 10th Amendment.

3. Which amendment should the Supreme Court apply in Plessy v. Ferguson? If the Supreme Court applied that amendment, which side would win the case and why?
   Student answers will vary.